GLIDDEN TOURISTS IN PRETTY COUNTRY

Race Course for 1910 Will Lead Over Historic Kentucky Roads.

BEAUTIFUL SCENERY AND GREEN ROLLING HILLS

French King Spent Day in Bardstown, Washington, Mapping Out Trip.

When the Glidden tourists hit the Kentucky trail next June they will enter a section rich in historic data.

Nelson county, Ky., is famed the world over for its whisky, and Bardstown is the county seat. It is a safe gamble that of the 80,000,000 persons in the United States, few outside of Kentucky, know that here lies the body of Lieutenant John Fitch of the New Jersey volunteers of the Continental army. That does not signify much, but when you add that Fitch had a steamboat plying the waters of the Delaware river, seventeen years before Fulton started up the Hudson in the Claremont, one takes notice.

river, seventeen years before Fulton started up the Hudson in the Claremont, one takes notice.

It was in a little pool, near the present bridge over the creek which separates Bardstown from Federal hill, that Fitch tried the model of his steam engine. The one and a half-storied brick house, where he lived, a stone's throw from the pool, is still standing and occupied by a negro family. His grave is unkept in a cemetery where the pigs and cattle roam, in the rear of the Hotel Newman, which was built 117 years ago. About a year ago the Daughters of the Confederacy placed a simple marker at the head of the grave. They are new trying to raise money for a suitable monument.

The grave of Fitch was discovered in a peculiar manner. Some individual was delying through the old records of the courthouse and found a transfer of Fitch's realty to the landlord of the hotel in consideration of his keep for the balance of his life, a pint of corn liquor a day and a burial lot, which was specified as so many feet from the jail, north and south from the cornerstone. The jail, by the way, is still in use.

Rowan Family.

Rowan Family. Rowan Family.

Federal hill was in the hands of a caretaker, when the Mitchell Ranger party, which is taking a preliminary spin over the Glidden route, dreve up the broad roadway to the old colonial door, where the Rowan family for over a century and a quarter have welcomed their guests. A white-haired old negrocame forward, doffing his hat, and asking: "How can I serve the young massas?"

came forward, doffing his hat, and asking: ''How can I serve the young massas;'

The house is a huge affair of red brick, two storied and basement, with the huge, flattopped chimneys one only finds in the south and New England. It stands on a knoll, commanding a superb sweep of the valley, and its driveway is flanked with rows of noble oaks. It was here that Stephen Collins Poster, who was visiting the Rowans in 1857, wrote the score and words of 'My Old Kentucky Home,' which brought him immortal fame, and which has become the cradle song of that great state. It is a rather touching thing that a statue of Foster has been placed in the new capital at Frankfort, which was paid for almost wholly by the school children of Kentucky, in sums ranging from a penny to a dollar.

The guide, Jim, who '' was raised on Massa Jim, Wilson, place, sah, sixty years ago,' led the Mitchell Ranger party to the family graveyard of the Rowans, where they sleep in the security of a life well spent for God, country, family and friends. It is in one sonner of the park, and the inscriptions on the headstones and monuments show how much country and state owe this distinguished Kentucky family.

As the Mitchell Ranger party returned to the house, Ol' Jim waved his distinguished Kentucky family.

But the glories of Bardstown are not ended. In 1796, the then Louis Philippe, later to become Louis XX of France, spent a day in Bardstown. He wanted to see the west, and George Washington mapped out his itinerary for him. The future king of France, being a devout Catholic, attended mass, and was amazed to see Indians taking part in the service.

When he returned to Europe to marry the daughter of Francis I, the first king of the two Sicilies, he told his prospective father-in-law of the work of the church in the wilderness of the new republic. This se impressed Francis hat he sent the struggling chapel, now St. Joseph's cathedral, some priceless works of art. There is "The Crucifixion," by Van Bree, over the altar. In the chancel are two Van Dykes, one of St. Bartholomew, by Rubens. There are other great works of the masters in this while, wooden cathedral nestling in the Kentucky hills, but those mentioned are the best.

When Louis Phillippe became king of France, as Louis XX, he remembered the work of the good fathers, and aenta hage cathedral clock, which to this day still marks the flight of time in the tall, white spire.

It may be that the Gliddenites will make Louisville via Lexington on this account. Both the Lexington and Louisville pikes are fine macadam affairs, well kept up. The tolligates are frequent, and the bar is always down. The country is rolling, and the valleys should delight the everyoff the panorama is shifting constantly, disclosing new beauties.

HARGE AGAINST JOHNSON

NEW YORK, March 29—The center of activities in the preparation for the champlonship fight between Jack Johnson and James Jeffits will be shifted here from the west this week. Tex Rickard and Jack Gleason, the promoters in the dusky champlen is expected to arrive Truesday. This probably will be Johnson's last appearance in New York until after, the fight, unless he is unavoidably detained. Wednesday he is to appear in the court of general sessions to answer to the charge of assault and battery upon Norman Pinder, a negro. Johnson's friends predict that the charge will not be pressed. It is understood that influence has been brought to bear upon Pinder to have him withdraw the charge.

AUTO ASSOCIATION With New Yorkers, WANTS 40 MEMBERS

Applications From Many States Are Already Being Received.

Forty state associations including, with their affiliated clubs, a total membership of over 40,000 members, is the aim that President Lewis R. Speare and his associate officers of the American Automo bile association have set to attain during the present year. Indeed, Judging from the activity already apparent in many of the largest clubs in the country, in addition to the growing tendency in many states to form automobile asso-ciations, it would not surprise the offi-cials of the national body to see this goal reached long before the close of the cials of the national body to see this goal reached long before the close of the year.

As an indication that this hoped-for result is based upon practical endeavors comes the announcement that at the monthly meeting of the executive committee of the American Automobile association, held in Boston hast Tuesday, the Florida State Automobile association, with eight federated clubs, was elected to membership. This makes the thirty-fourth state body now affiliated with the national organization. At the same time the Savannah Automobile club was elected, and this club completes the requisite number in Georgia for the formation of a state association, and plans for a state automobile association in Georgia are now under way.

From the reports which have been received by Secretary Frederick H. Elliott at national headquarters in New York during the past few weeks from various parts of the country, the fact is clearly revealed that a decided movement is under way toward the federation of automobile club interests in many states in the far west and in the south into state organizations. Before the next meeting of the executive committee there is every evidence that the application of the Oregon State Automobile association will be received. This will, in all probability, be followed by that of Georgia, while other states where the movement is reaching definite action are North Carolina, South Carolina and Tennessee. Indeed, before the close of the year it will not be at all surprising to see the solid south lined up as a body of affiliated state associations with the national governing body.
